ENVIRONMENTAL CONSIDERATIONS

MAHCollection is reducing overall production waste ensuring all material is creatively re-used in designs including several limited edition accessories.

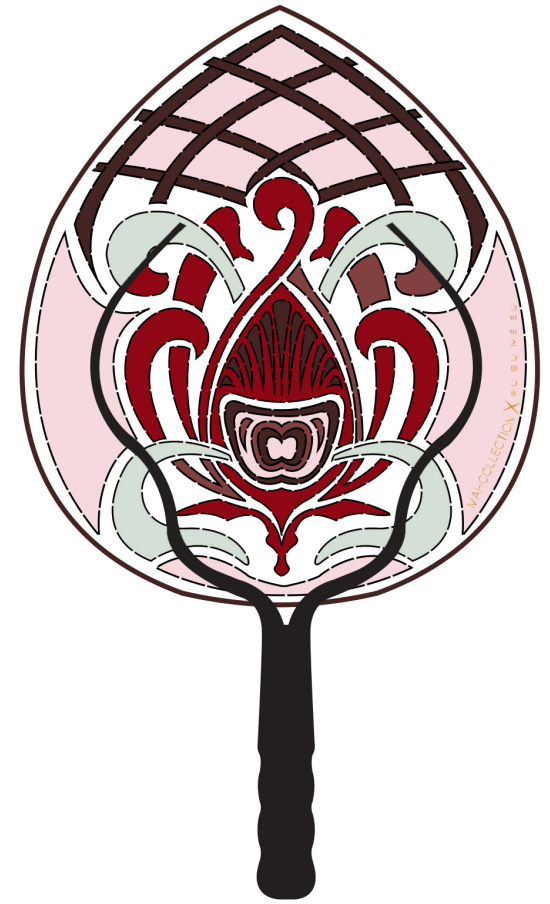

The company's predilection for natural fabrics including silk and linen supports longevity and environmentally friendly production methods. Women tend to treasure silk pieces and keep them as long as possible, so in that sense offering silk is sustainable.

We are committed to produce the label locally and in fair-labour workshops in-line with an ethical training program at village level.

Venus in the Shell

Venus in the Shell collection captures the spirit of the woman rising from the sea a metaphor from the ancient Greek mythology, the shell being the symbol of the female most sacred part. Fluid and elegant with intricate pleating details in chiffon this collection's pieces have an irresistible lightness and translates and absolute form of femininity

Canopus Farms is a small family run business located at the base of the Warrumbungles. All our honey is fresh from the hives and is not heat treated in any way. Unheated honey can crystallise over time and this is a normal process which means the honey retains all the good stuff and a delicious unchanged taste. There will be a variation in taste and colour depending on the flowers the bees have visited.
